Sworn in as the 80th Governor of New Hampshire in 2005, John Lynch has worked to bring people together to move New Hampshire forward. Gov. Lynch was re-elected in 2006 and 2008.

Under Governor Lynch's leadership, the state has made significant progress on some of the critical challenges facing New Hampshire families, including:

- Acting to help more young people graduate from high school
- Expanding the number of children with access to health insurance
- Passing a law to create a more affordable health insurance alternative for small businesses
- Better protecting children from sexual predators;
- Preserving New Hampshire's environment
- Increasing job training for New Hampshire workers
- Building the economy with tax credits for research and development, and job creation in the North Country
- Creating an effective, realistic transportation improvement plan
- Reforming the state's retirement system

Under Gov. Lynch, New Hampshire was named the "Most Livable State" in the nation, as well as the "Safest State." And, as always, New Hampshire maintains a business-friendly tax environment, and an overall high quality of life.
